

Introducing 'The Sound Shed'

If great, intimate live performance in a relaxed setting, out country sounds good, we got you! What is 'The Sound Shed'? The Sound Shed is one of the many creative projects of husband and wife team Michael Self and Karen Clarke. As the name suggests this innovative pair have adapted their rural shed into a welcoming and rustic live performance venue at 605 Wortley Road, Inglewood. With a small stage, lighting and sound system this small, low-key theatre is off the beaten track and calls to audiences who like keeping it real.

Karen is no stranger to the stage, being a musician, songwriter and bands-woman who enjoys the magic of bringing performers and musicians together. "There's a magical energy that flows between performer and audience at intimate live music gigs. That's what The Sound Shed is all about." Between them Mike and Karen have hosted live performance, much of it original, on and off the beaten track over the last 30 years at various venues including The Kapiti Live Music Club and Studio 64 in Inglewood. Real-deal rhythm and blues man Pip Payne up from Wellington with guests is kicking off the new season of gigs on Saturday 30th July. Originally from the UK with beginnings in the folk scene, Pip has been a leading light in the Wellington blues scene since forever. He's performed across the country at premier Jazz and Blues Festival, yet he's equally at home in your local cafe or brewery cranking out an authentic blues set. With acoustic and resonator guitars over sloop is a full, textured sound with plenty of drive when he winds up. Pip is going to grab a couple of locals to help him out at some stage in the show. Contact Karen at the Sound Shed for more information 0274421632.
