As of today most of those with school age children will be breathing a sigh of relief as they head back to school today, or are back on going very shortly.

Otherwise you are remembering how much you hate making school lunches and trying to get children out of bed to make it to school on time.

One day Prime Minister will be one of those parents. There has been a lot of discussion around how she will cope with being both.

It seems she has a great partner who will be the main carer so along with all the other working mums out there I'm sure they will figure it out.

Although wasn't our last Prime Minister a working parent too so not sure what all the fuss is about!!!

Shade-by The River

Where do all the giggles go? We are on a fixed plan giving us sixty giggles for us to use on emails, browsing and paying our bills on line. Generally we only use about a quarter of our available plan. The family came to us for Christmas – two festive days with new phones, an eight-year-old and a nine-year-old, together with two mums and one dad. First thing they all wanted was the password for the internet. And the giggles started to disappear. Twirling thumbs soon had cars racing around a circuit as they streamed car racing. I think that it was going on four phones at once and they were all racing, but not against each other. The giggles were taking a bit of a hammering; and so it continued for hours each day. Two of the boys went away but they came back again for another bite of my giggles.

I started to get a bit concerned as I know extra data is quite expensive. My fears were confirmed when I found that they were fast approaching my allocation. I did a quick bit of research and decided to double up my giggly plan for a month and make sure that we did not run out. Now we had plenty for them to goggle up. But – you guessed it – they cut down on their usage for the last few days and only just skimmed into my extra data, so I could have done it cheaper on extra data.

What do these companies actually sell us? Obviously a connection to the web, but why does it cost more if you use more data?

Food for thought, eh?

At The Boarding Gates (Joan Errol)

The Cue Theatre's April production, "Boeing-Boeing", directed by Stephen Leeks, has begun rehearsals. The cast members, namely Simon Bick, Lindsay Franklin, Rebecca Leasberg, Catherine Jordan, Karina Nixon and Victoria Mills, arrived for their first reading to find the bones of the set already erected. Set builder Peter Haines and designer Alan Stevenson had been busy over the holidays! Soon the décor team will arrive to carry on the work of creating another professional looking set for Cue.

As many people will remember, "Boeing-Boeing" has already been presented in Ingwood by the society. That was in 1973. Dorne Arthur was the director, and the show was staged in the Town Hall on March 28th and 29th. We are told that the local vicar starred in that production.

"Boeing-Boeing" is a comedy, quite risqué – but the play has not lost any of its original appeal. The fact that it is not totally "PC" adds to its humour in our opinion. Stephen Leeks is keeping the story faithful to the time in which it is set, so the costume designers are researching airline uniforms of that period, when travelling by air was a glamorous adventure.

So – here we are at the boarding gates – the beginning of a new show at Cue. There will be much laughter, and for many of the audiences, a bit of nostalgia for those earlier days of air travel.

Gardening With Sue From Hammer (Sue Marsh)

Wow, what a summer! The garden certainly responds in a different way when the weather is hot and sunny, a very different scenario from last summer. For those of you who are lucky to have a glasshouse, you probably enjoy picking delicious hot house tomatoes, even when our summers are maybe not so hot and sunny as this one is shaping up to be. Those of us who want to enjoy home grown tomatoes outside are always subject to the weather. This year is a great cucumber and tomato season, and largely due to the warmer weather. Keep watering as they form their new fruit and as both are high in water content, they need water! Well nourished tomatoes will have a better chance of keeping insect pests and diseases at bay, and all you'll have to worry about is keeping the birds from eating your crop.

Plants use nutrients from the soil as they grow, so replenishing the nutrients used by your tomatoes ensures they will grow to their full potential. For tomatoes planted in garden beds feed every four weeks during key growth periods of spring and summer. Tui Tomato Food is a blend of nitrogen, phosphorus and a generous amount of potassium formulated to promote the growth and fruiting potential of all types of tomatoes. For tomatoes in pots and containers use a Liquid Fertiliser made from blood and bone with added potassium at seven to ten day intervals. This will give your tomatoes an extra boost, promoting strong healthy growth and excellent root development for an abundance of tasty tomatoes. So I'm off to enjoy fresh picked tomatoes on crackers sprinkled with garlic salt, hopefully before the bird has its lunch! Happy gardening!

Lions News (Viv Adams)

The members have been very busy over the last few weeks. Camp Quality was recently held in New Plymouth. Our club was host to Camp Quality on the Friday. 175 people were supplied a beautiful BBQ lunch with plenty of variety of salads to cater for all their dietary requirements. After lunch they went through the maize maze. They all thoroughly enjoyed it. Grateful thanks to Gas & Plumbing, Silver Fern Farms, Goblins Poultry Farm and Rata Kiwi Gardens for their support in helping to make this day a memorable one.

A BBQ was held at the home of the incoming president Vanda Robinson. A lovely evening which was well attended by members, partners and families.

The Taranaki Maize Maze is as popular as ever with three very busy weekends. Families are making the most of the fine weather before the children go back to school. This weekend we are opening up for four days. With Waitangi Day on Tuesday 6th we have decided to open up on the Monday 5th as well. Hours are 11.00am – 5.00pm. Mitre 10 Mega have supplied $50 vouchers for weekly prize draws for people that have been through the maize maze. The first two winners are Monty Mills and Brendin McCabe. Our members have decided this year that the major recipient from the funds raised will be the Marinoato Wing Project. Esther Swift At Studio 64 (Karen Clarke)

Internationally acclaimed and world travelled harpist Esther Swift is performing up at Studio 64 on Thursday 8 February at 7.30pm. In this rare opportunity to be close and personal with a harpist you can expect to be truly transported from the landscapes of her Scottish homeland to places you'd never imagine a harp could go including being both alternative to acoustic guitar. Her voice is sultry and sensuous and you'll hear a blend of jazz, folk, classical and everything in between along with stories and musical experiences from around the world. There is an organic quality to her playing as the veers dramatically from poised, fluid and precise movements to those rich, dark and sweeping bass notes. She's warm, witty and quite remarkably calling in at Ingwood on her New Zealand tour. All welcome Doors open at 7.00pm and tickets are $15 cash at door.

The Ingwood Heritage Centre is searching for information on its next project. This coming display will feature a transport company Ingwood Motors Ltd. It was incorporated on 03 November 1921 and dissolved on 31 March 2009. Over that time it had a large effect on the Ingwood District and its development.

The heritage centre is wanting any information, staff and drivers, clients, photos (we are will be very happy to copy), memorabilia, stories. Drop in, we will be pleased to see you, help us to retain and collate our history for the future. Did you know that the Moa Dairy Company used fourteen Ingwood Motors Ltd tankers to collect its milk before starting up its own collection in 1967?

PURANGI KIWI

Losing a member of our kiwi family was never going to be easy and especially when they have been a part of our project story for a very long time.

Sadly, Maru, one of the oldest birds we monitor was discovered dead by Bob last Tuesday. Our kiwi expert Sid Marsh has estimated he was probably over 50 years old. In spite of his old age and his non-existent reproductive abilities it didn't stop Maru from the thrill of the chase, and in 2014 he was heard calling/dueting with a female! The team were impressed with his attempts, although no chick ever eventuated.

We changed his transmitter in May 2016, then two months later he went off the airways. We thought he had been chased off his territory which happens as they get old. Bob spent many hours searching to no avail. We were thrilled when we found him within his territory in early December with the help of the kiwi specialist dog. His transmitter was faulty and had failed. He has been blind since we first caught him in 2004 and during his annual checks we had been recording that he was slowly losing condition. We put a new transmitter on him. On the weekend his transmitter beeped the morality code, where it had been since his death on 6 January.

Maru always responded to Bob's kiwi whistle calling with his distinctive squeaky call reply. He died of natural causes, still in his own territory. We were pleased we found him again before we finally lost him.

RIP Maru we will miss you.
