ANZAC Dawn Parade
ANZAC morning dawned fine and still. In the early morning light a large crowd gathered to watch the parade assemble, then march to the Cenotaph. The parade marched past the rows of crosses on the cenotaph lawn, each with its posy of flowers placed there by the pipers and brownies. It is a very poignant time reflecting that each cross represents a young Ingwood life lost, lost while serving on our behalf, never to have the opportunity to live, to love, to have families, to grow old. The service was well received but there may be a little practice needed with the Australian National Anthem. Sincere thanks to the New Plymouth Cade Unit for Cenotaph Duties and to The Ingwood High School pupils for the address and leading the New Zealand anthem.

They shall grow not old, as we that are left grow old; Age shall not weary them, nor the years condemn. At the going down of the sun and in the morning, We will remember them.

Editors Comments
With winter sports well under way, it makes a busy time for all those involved. So far the weather has been coming to the party. One very important element to remember a game is just that 'a game'. Adults/children wanting to enjoy themselves, not be abused or have enormous amounts of pressure put on them. It is not life or death, it is a game that has been chosen to play. This includes the umpires/referees as well. Especially has most of them will be umpiring/refereeing voluntary.

Please remember this if you are playing or even standing on the sideline. Think before you speak.

Shade-by the River
In the last edition the editor wrote about the freedoms that have been treasured over a long period of time. This set me thinking about those freedoms, and it strikes me that they are steadily being eroded by 'political correctness' and modern technology. As an example we have seen local councillors bailed over the coals for expressing their personal views over their social media pages that are open to scrutiny by more than just their friends. The higher your profile, the less freedom of speech you have. Israel Folau, the brilliant Australian rugby full-back, chose to speak out strongly on social media about his religious beliefs. As I write this, he is facing his employers to decide his future in his chosen career.

Our freedom of worship is also getting a big cut-back. We are still able to follow our own path but there is no form of religious instruction in our schools. We have generations coming up that have not had any leadership in this direction, and they are not so conversant with morality and principals. I realise that it is not so simple as it was when I was young, but I think that there should be a bit more emphasis, both at home and in schools, on teaching right and wrong, and codes of conduct. There are several things that used to be illegal and now have been legitimised and have gained acceptance. The older generations cannot say what they really think, as they would be condemned by the PC brigade. Now the government is considering legalising cannabis. How does this sit with banning smoking? 2025!

Food for thought, eh?

Athletics News (Rachel Gilbert)

Ingwood Athletic club had five children selected to represent Taranaki in the 2019 12/13 year Interprovincial Athletics meeting in Christchurch over Easter. Maddison Leake, Daniel Gilbert, Matahau Martin, Janelle Dhedding and Emma Gyde. Kevin Gyde also went with the team as one of the managers. They raised money by selling raffie and selling cookies. They would like to thank all the people that supported them but special thank you to the Ingwood Runners and Walkers Club and the Ingwood Lions for their financial assistance to help make it possible for them to get to compete again the rest of New Zealand. Their team came home with 29 personal bests and had a fantastic experience.

Box Fit at Next Level Fitness (Dane Ladbrook)
The popular Box Fit craze is continuing to sweep through New Zealand using non-body contact boxing moves to help shed those stubborn kilo's and develop core strength and coordination. Box Fit is a cardiovascular workout increasing stamina in the heart and lungs. The sessions at Next Level Fitness will last about 45 mins and are for all levels of fitness. It is based on the training used by boxing to include slipping, boxing drills including footwork and abdominal, focusing on fitness and toning. Involving a mixture of drills on the bag. Sessions also include core work and elements of fitness and conditioning work. To make a punch and hold your balance, abdominal muscles need to be strong and toned. This core core stability can reduce the risk of back pain and improve posture. A towel is recommended to mop up sweat as well as a water bottle for rehydration along with comfortable workout gear and running shoes. Eat a small snack i.e. banana, sandwich or protein drink an hour before sessions as there will be a lot of burning energy.

Ingwood Fire Brigade (Stephen Warden)

When the quiet night sky is cut short by the sound of a siren and fall sirens, you know that someone in your community are getting out of bed lightning fast and making their way to the local fire station to be of assistance to someone in need. But what you may not know is these people have been following in the foot steps of men and women for 125 years in Ingwood.

In June this year the fire brigade is hosting a 125th jubilee, where there will be parade of fire appliances through the ages and demonstrations for all to come and be apart of.

These events start with an Open Day on Saturday 1st June, 10.00am to 2.00pm. A rolling parade of historical and current fire trucks will be happening from 12.00pm. We invite all who wish to come and enjoy the displays and appliances to come along.

Fire Fighters Combat Challenge - Last month four brave souls took a trip to Palmerston North to compete in the North Island Fire Fighters Combat Challenge (toughest two mins in sports). Jarard Peters, Stephen Warden, Lucy Wilson and Rachelle Mairdoud took up the challenge. The girls put the boys to shame by coming first over the weekend just competed in the same challenge but this time on the Wellington Water Front at the National Fire Fighters Combat Challenge. Once again these girls put the boys to shame. Absolutely smashing their time from the North Islands and placing third at the event in the Female Tandem. They have achieved something very special and they are absolutely thrilled by their ability to push it to the top. Jarard took a massive chunk off his individual run from North Islands to run a 2mins 40secs. These athletes are looking forward to next year already.

Ingwood Heritage Centre News (Gay Laurence)

The history of Ingwood's Post Office and Telephone Exchange. A display is now open which depicts the history of 1875 - 2019. A fantastic exhibition showing Ingwood and its historical heart. Check out the then and now, find the locals that worked there, you may know many of them.

In 1867 the Ingwood community signed a petition asking that a separate post and telegraph building be erected on the section originally set apart for the purpose. It was on the corner of Junction and Mountain roads. (Rata and Mast Streets now). Mail as that time was often addressed to "Mountains" 1875. The first official Post Office was opened in the "Government Store" close to the Kurapepe stream, the second in Franklyn's Store, (Martins Fashions site), the third in the Railway Station. 1900: Population of Ingwood is now 719. The first Ingwood Telephone Exchange has opened (six subscribers). 1902: Finally the new dedicated Post Office is completed. 1904: The first telephone exchange is opened (the fourth). It is a fine, substantial, high quality, brick two storied building at the corner of Rata Street and Mountain Road (Mata Street), containing a public office, mail room, postmaster's room, private box lobby with forty-two boxes, telegraph lobby and a residence for the Postmaster. 1986: This historic landmark disappears. What was once a proud building that had stood the test of time is demolished, consigned to history, photos and memories. The new purpose built Post Office at 25 Rata Street is opened, ten years later it is closed. 1992: Finally the new dedicated Post Office is completed. 1998: The 'new' building is sold and becomes the Fun Ho! Toy Museum which includes the Ingwood Heritage Centre.

Durham Hill (Christine FitzPatrick)
Durham Hill resembled a very busy florist shop. Picture bunches of fresh, long stemmed, perfect roses, gorgeous carnations in stunning colours alongside baskets laden with foliage providing amazing textures. Our task was to create pretty posy bouquets for Mother's Day gifts. No one better to advise us than local lass Stephanie Valentini. The Love Bunch Florist, Stephanie completed a Floral Diploma by correspondence five years ago and now has her own purpose built studio. You may have seen her eye catching 'Flowers' tags as you drive along Rata Street just before the High School. Her daughter Courtney was able to relay her bedtime by accompanying Mum so our meeting and we could see that she has inherited artistic flair too. After one or two simple pointers and a quick demonstration it was our turn to create. I think everyone was delighted with their results. Durham Hill have a lovely collection of gifts to distribute to some extra special Mothers. Woolen jugs were donated to several organisations including Marimoto. Neo-Natal also received crocheted octopuses and Pregnancy Help were the recipients of scarves, hats and jackets too. There was some discussion about sourcing more wool for our prolific knitters. We are still collecting used stamps, plastic bread tags and aluminium can tabs. Else Jones read the recent letter she had received from our Horden WI Link in England. This is their Centennial year so there are many interesting activities taking place.

Garden Clues with Sue (Sue Marsh)

The warm mild weather has continued, but guess the weather will be changing quickly, but enjoy the late autumn while we can get it. As you have harvested your late summer, autumn crops, make sure you refill the beds with compost or vegetable mix, and you can plant broccoli, cauliflower or cabbage for late spring harvest. Plant bok choy or kale for late winter harvest, and directly sow in trays or containers, spinach, radish, snow-peas, peas and broadbeans for spring/ summer harvest. Direct sow parsnip, radish, kohlrabi, swede or turnips. Just remember, good things take time, so it's important you understand the truth of how long from sowing to harvest. For example, broccoli will take 3 months, a lettuce 6 weeks, and garlic 6 months. Add some frosty cold weather and everything slows, almost grinding to a halt. So when you say planting the winter garden - it's just that - planting. The food you're harvesting now was hopefully planted in late summer, or early autumn. Feijoa are in abundance now, but think about pruning right after harvest. Remove dead, damaged, crossing and vertical wood. Remove all the low wood to give your feijoa a clear trunk, for speedy airflow and easy access to the fallen fruits which are so much better than the picked ones. Use mostly thinning cuts to produce an open canopy for good light penetration and access for bird and bee pollinators. Thinning cuts stimulate a heap of replacement wood - important because feijoa fruit on the base of the new wood. A cycle of fresh wood coming on each season means you can keep your tree compact yet productive. Love plenty of young new shoots for next year's fruits, then finish off with a few heading cuts for height and wood management. Don't forget to pop in some pansies, polyanthus or primulas for your winter flower garden, plenty to choose from. Happy gardening!

New Team Member (Karen Morantz)

Experience Purangi have a new team member! Welcoming on board Jayden returns home from completing his university degree in Zoology and having done an internship at Pukaka Mount Bruce Wildlife Centre gaining practical handling experience with kiwi and other native bird species (wild and captive). And away from work Jayden enjoys a game of rugby and liked his latest encounter trying to catch the lowi Mufuri as 'trying to catch the grassy slippery football flying out of the scrum'. Great skills Jayden!! P.S. Experience Purangi can report that Mufuri is doing great and passed his health check with flying colours!

RIP Graeme Ross Small (Denise Lovridge)

The Ingwood Welfare Society wants to acknowledge the passing of Graeme Small. Graeme was a committee member of the Ingwood Welfare Society for many years. Although Graeme had health issues he never dwelt on them - and certainly didn't want anyone else to either. He was committed to seeing the hospital wing and renovations of Marinoto completed to a high standard. Graeme spent many hours at Marinoto on maintenance projects and over the last twelve months or so has been part of the Project Management team involved with the new hospital wing. His eye for detail and his knowledge and commitment was an invaluable asset. As a local business leader Graeme has been a keen supporter of the Ingwood community, and his passing will be felt very deeply by his family, friends and the people of Ingwood.

Ingwood Photography (Viv Adamsen)

Some of the club members went on a club outing to Te Wera Forest Arboretum. The autumn colours were not quite there but they had a lot of fun trying to capture images of the fanfalls and other birds that are around the trees. The Ingwood Photography Annual Colour competition was held on Sunday April 28th at the beautiful venue Puri Tawa Estate. Dr Murray Cave FRNZI FRPNZ was the evaluator. Murray is a scientist and works for the Guburno District Council. He had a very hard job of evaluating the colour images. Five points difference between the top 13 images. Very high standard work is shown by the Ingwood members.

Placings were: 1st Cody Huta (Tui) (above), 2nd Viv Adamsen (Proboscis Monkey), 3rd Robert Small (Trophy), Highly Commended Robert Small (Paritutu Rock), Commended Cody Huta (Glass Ball). Murray's presentation was on his visit to some of the Indonesian Islands to see the Komodo Dragon and he also visited the place which made world headline news where a monkey supposedly took a selfie on a camera and it was contested as to who owns the copyright for that photo. This was followed by a lovely afternoon. For further information on the Club contact Rob Small 7538444 or Viv Adamsen 7528286.

Inglewood Golf Club - Disc Golf (Dobbie Outman)

A new 18 hole disc golf course has been established at the golf club. To play, the disc golfers have a set of discs that work like drivers, fairway woods, chippers and putters. They tee off and throw up the fairways to eventually land in 18 steel baskets around the course which are located on the trees. The etiquette and rules are very much like normal golf. This is a trial year to see how it fits in with ball golfers and any disc "green fee" players must play with a member of the club.

Anyone looking to get involved in this fun new sport can contact Zac on 021 08638927 or Chris on 0272 45 1909. Membership information and all details are available on the Inglewood Golf Club website.

Rotary Charity Car Show Funds Presented to Fire Brigade (Gloria O'Dowd)

Chief Cameron Gillespie was presented a cheque for $2500 from Inglewood Rotary Club. The funds were raised from the 2019 Charity Car Show. Inglewood and New Plymouth Brigades attended the event and were glad to be able to show their vehicles, equipment and skills to the public. Cameron advised us that a new Transit Van (the last one was ten years old) has been purchased and the money received last night will go towards the signwriting costs on the new van, with an acknowledgement of Rotary. The Brigade now have six women in their crews which adds a whole new and valuable dimension to the brigade. Thank you to all our Volunteer Fire Fighters and all Volunteers in the Community.

Lions News (via Admin)

Inglewood Lions members are still being very active in the community with a lot of big and small projects.

The Anzac parade was attended by several members of our Lions Club and a wreath was placed at the centrepiece. A working bee has been held to remove the Kaimata School PTA Quiz Night - Kaimata Hall and stack them away in alphabetical order ready for next year.

The recently held Meccano Exhibition saw ten Inglewood Lions members manning the entrance.

Inglewood Lions have been visiting two of our members who have been unwell. We wish them a speedy recovery.

Two members attended the Lions Multiple District Convention which was held in Blenheim. Congratulations goes to our Inglewood Lions member Graham Robinson who received a Lions International Presidents Award for seven years service on Advisory Council Board of New Zealand Lions.

Inglewood Welfare Society Afternoon with Volunteers (Liz Finnigan)

The Inglewood Welfare Society invited members of NZ Red Cross, Inglewood Branch and Meals on Wheels volunteers to a complimentary afternoon tea at Marino Rest Home. A tour of the Home was given to the invited guests. Denise Lovridge then thanked the Meals on Wheels team for the services they give to the community, especially to the stay-at-home elderly.

Muffy, assistant manager of Marino, also thanked the team and expressed concern and responsibility for the health and welfare of the receivers of the meals.

Over the afternoon tea the Meals on Wheels volunteers and Meals on Wheels staff and volunteers chatted about elderly receiving the meals, and what a pleasure it was to be of service in this way and to check up and chat with the wonderful elderly people in Inglewood who always receive the meals with pleasure and thanks.

Free Road Code Course at Inglewood High (Courtney Milleden)

This term Inglewood High will host Road Code Theory, a free course designed to teach students how to pass their written driver's licence tests, on Tuesdays from 3:30pm to 6:00pm. Road Code Theory teaches students how to study the road code. It uses interactive classroom exercises, computer activities, practice tests, instructional videos, and class discussions to learn the rules of the road. Students are allowed to enter in the course as many times as necessary before they are ready to pass their driver's licence. Students can be working toward their learners, restricted, or HT licence. (The HT licence is for those learning to drive vehicles that weigh more than 6,000 kg, like trucks, trailers, forklifts, and buses.)

The course is designed for those with literacy issues, including dyslexia. Generally, these students need or needed assistance in school. These students still struggle with reading, writing, and handling numbers. This course is geared towards students who would struggle to learn if they sat at home reading a book on the road code.

The course is offered through Tararaki Adult Literacy Services, a not-for-profit charity which provides free and subsidized community education courses. This course is also offered in Waitara and New Plymouth. Students do not need to be enrolled at Inglewood High to take the course. Students must be at least 16. For students who have not enrolled, they need parental permission to go to school. To enrol, please call 06 7564650.

Above: A rogue white carrot (Daucus Carota) was found among Arnie Brarstrom's carrot crop much to his surprise. Carrots date back to the 10th Century and only in the 16th Century did they have been orange. White carrot seeds are available from some garden centres and from Seedavers Taranaki
